FOREIGN MEAT INSPECTION 1976

Report of the Secretary of Agriculture to the Committee on Agriculture, House of Representatives Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, U.S. Senate

PART I.—Narrative

Responsibility for administration of Section 20 of the Federal Meat Inspection Act is assigned to Field Operations, Meat and Poultry Inspection Program, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Official Recognition of Foreign Countries

Only those countries which have meat inspection systems with standards at least equal to those of the U.S. meat inspection program are permitted to ship meat to the United States. In 1976, there were 46 such countries. Approval of a foreign country's meat inspection system is based on an evaluation of the particular country's laws and regulations governing its inspection program and an on-site survey of the system in operation. Recognition is not accorded to any country without concurrence of the U.S. Department of State. Most of the approved countries gained official recognition many years ago.

Those countries which are currently authorized to export meat to the United States are:

Argentina	Finland	Nicaragua
Australia	France	Northern Ireland
Austria	Germany (Federal Republic)	Norway
Belgium	Guatemala	Panama
Belize	Haiti	Paraguay
Brazil	Honduras	Poland
Bulgaria	Hungary	Romania
Canada	Iceland	Scotland
China (Republic of)	Ireland (Eire)	Spain
Colombia	Italy	Sweden
Costa Rica	Japan	Switzerland
Czechoslovakia	Luxembourg	Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands
Denmark	Mexico	Uruguay
Dominican Republic	Netherlands	Venezuela
El Salvador	New Zealand	Yugoslavia
England and Wales

Approved Plants

Products may be imported only from those plants which foreign meat inspection officials have certified as meeting U.S. standards. Thus, not all plants under an approved foreign program are eligible to export to the United States. Some do not desire certification; others cannot qualify because of faulty construction or facilities, poor sanitation, or failure to meet other requirements. Part III of this report shows that some countries certify only one, two, or three plants. The countries of Austria, Bulgaria, Colombia, Finland, Japan, Luxembourg, Norway, Scotland, Taiwan, and Venezuela had no certified plants in calendar year 1976. On December 31, 1976, 10 countries—Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Canada, Costa Rica, Denmark, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, and Poland—provided 84 percent of the foreign meat plants certified for U.S. export. They produced 88 percent of the meat imported in calendar year 1976.

Foreign Programs Staff

The Foreign Programs Staff in Field Operations of APHIS has the responsibility to determine which foreign countries should be officially recognized. The Staff reviews operations in certified foreign meat plants and coordinates the activities of U.S. import and export inspectors. In calendar year 1976, 20 veterinarians were assigned to conduct the foreign plant review function of the Staff. Twelve of these employees were stationed overseas—one each in Brisbane, Canberra, and Melbourne, Australia; Wellington, New Zealand; Montevideo, Uruguay; San Jose, Costa Rica; Mexico City, Mexico; Ottawa, Canada; Copenhagen, Denmark, the Hague, Netherlands; Bonn, Germany; and Vienna, Austria. The remaining reviewers are stationed in Washington, D.C., and travel to their assigned countries on a rigorous schedule. All these positions are filled by veterinarians with considerable experience in the domestic meat inspection program.

In addition, the Foreign Programs Staff plans, coordinates, and directs programs designed to insure uniform and effective inspection of products for U.S. import inspection—both in the foreign country and the point of entry into the United States. It also provides staff supervision to programs for the reinspection and certification of U.S. export shipments. In total, about 100 domestic field inspectors are engaged in the inspection of meat at the point of entry into the United States. The Staff participated in various training sessions conducted during the year for import inspectors.

All aspects of slaughtering and processing operations are examined by U.S. veterinarians.

Operations of the Foreign Review Team

In calendar year 1976, U.S. veterinarians either singly or in teams visited each foreign plant certified for the export of meat into the United States as often as necessary to insure compliance with the act. Plants exporting large volumes and those having minor problems or past difficulties in meeting U.S. standards were observed most frequently. The judgments expressed in Subpart B of Part III of this report were made as a result of observations by the Foreign Programs Officers in each of these foreign plants.

USDA is continuously studying its policy on frequency of foreign meat plant visits. Factors considered are size, nature and complexity of a foreign operation; the demonstrated stability and quality of the foreign inspection program; the anticipated volume of U.S. exports; and the availability of U.S. reviewers.

Plants exporting large volumes and other plants of special concern are visited at least four times annually. All other certified plants are visited at least twice a year. Exempted from the minimum of two annual visits is a group of certified, but non-exporting plants, in Canada. A study of Subpart B of Part III of this report shows these objectives were substantially achieved in 1976.

Detailed schedules for review of foreign meat plants are arranged with the officials of the foreign government by the Agricultural Attaché of the United States Embassy. For U.S.-based reviewers, this is done shortly before or after arrival in the country. All countries have been most cooperative in granting access to their plants at the time requested. No claim is made that the visits are unannounced, but the Foreign Programs Officers are trained to consider this factor when making evaluations. They conduct an independent, in-depth survey of every feature requiring inspection in the foreign plant.

In doing this, they check the same items that supervisory inspectors look for in U.S. plants. For example, the U.S. veterinary reviewer insists on careful examination of the animals both before and after slaughter, clean operative practices, sanitary maintenance and construction of facilities, necessary sampling for laboratory analysis, accurate labeling, inspectional controls over materials leaving and entering the plant, safe water supplies, and effective supervision of inspectors. Reviewers are accompanied by representatives of the foreign inspection service and the two parties have a free exchange of technical information. During calendar year 1976, there were more than 8,338 inspectors employed by foreign governments in those plants which export to the United States.

To achieve uniformity and to maintain control over the program, Foreign Programs Officers are not permitted to order changes or take other definitive action until their findings have been evaluated by the Administrator, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. However, the Foreign Programs Officer is delegated authority to issue a product segregation order if, in the officer's opinion, the Administrator will probably remove the authority for a plant to export to the United States. In these cases, the foreign officials are asked to keep all product made after the time of the review separate and apart with the understanding that the product cannot be exported to the United States if the plant is subsequently determined to be ineligible by the Administrator. Similarly, if the reviewer questions the eligibility of categories of products to enter the United States, such products may be ordered held separate pending a Washington, D.C., Headquarters decision on the matter. This action may be taken irrespective of date of manufacture.

Action on Adverse Foreign Review Findings

The action taken by the Administrator when deficiencies are reported by U.S. officers depends both on the nature of the deficiencies and on the foreign government's response to them. If no health hazard is involved and the particular deficiency can and will be corrected in a short period of time, shipments of products usually are not interrupted. In case of serious deficiencies, or where previously requested corrections have not been made, the eligibility of the offending plant or plants to export products to the United States is removed. Similarly, if the Administrator determines that the problem is system-wide, he may remove export authorization from all plants in a system, or, if more appropriate, impose an embargo on products or classes of products from that country until USDA is convinced that U.S. standards are enforced.

U.S. reviewers are accompanied by foreign inspection officials during plant reviews.

Workmanship and operative practices are essential points of U.S. reviews.

The Administrator informs the official of the foreign country in writing of the adverse findings, any restrictive action required by U.S. law, and conditions he has established for maintaining or restoring eligibility to export. With more familiarity with the U.S. program, however, most foreign officials no longer wait for such formal notification before taking appropriate remedial action of their own.

Program Actions 1976

At the beginning of calendar year 1976, there were 1,084 approved foreign plants. During the year, 97 plants were removed from the approved list. Subsequently, 24 were reinstated. The plants were removed by foreign governments either at the request of the United States or for various other reasons. Among the latter were normal attrition, withdrawal from U.S. market, and decisions by the foreign government to remove a plant's eligibility before formal U.S. action is taken. Thirty-one of the plants removed in calendar year 1976 by the foreign government had been reviewed by Foreign Programs Officers and were found not to meet the requirements of the Federal Meat Inspection Act.

A detailed report of plants and classes of products rejected for failure to meet U.S. standards is included in Part III, Subpart E and Part IV of this report.

Other Developments

In addition to identification and rejection of ineligible plants and products, the Foreign Programs Staff continues to direct considerable attention to the correction of minor technical problems in foreign plants and systems. Although the nature of these findings did not warrant plant rejections, their prompt correction was made a requisite to continued export eligibility for the plants. In many cases the problem was caused by incomplete understanding by a foreign official of the application of U.S. technical requirements to a specific situation. Often there was a need to replace marginally acceptable facilities and practices with more modern equipment and better techniques.

On occasion, USDA officials suggested adjustments in the management practices of the inspection system to assure more effective and reliable performance. These changes often required considerable investment in plant rehabilitation costs and, in several countries, an increased allocation of funds to finance the inspection service. In practically all cases where sections of existing approved plants were remodeled, advanced design equipment was installed and the newest manufacturing techniques were implemented. Among adjustments in the management practices of foreign inspection systems were improvements in staffing patterns, increased training and supervisory capability, updating of regulations and other instructions, and the institution of improved inspection techniques and programs. USDA participation in negotiations and communications with the appropriate foreign governments insured that needed changes progressed at a satisfactory pace.

In 1976, the Foreign Programs Staff received formal requests from two countries seeking USDA recognition of their inspection systems preparatory to exporting meat and poultry products to the United States. Work continued toward granting recognition of the inspection systems of three countries. Recognition to export meat products to the United States was granted to one country, the Republic of China (Taiwan). The Staff was also engaged in the publication and clarification of the special requirements of various foreign countries to the U.S. industry, thus enabling U.S.

establishments to continue trade in the international sector. Representatives of the staff participated in several multi-country meetings on meat hygiene standards.

Poultry Imports

While no formal report on poultry product imports is required by the Poultry Products Inspection Act, it should be noted that these imports are controlled under regulations virtually identical to those applied to meat. Only Canada, France, and Hong Kong are authorized to export poultry products to the United States. Hong Kong had one approved plant as of December 31, 1976. Work was continued on the recognition of two other countries. The export of meat and poultry inspection program in France and Canada are for all practical purposes a single program. Therefore, many poultry plants in Canada and all but two or three in France are also certified meat plants, and as such, are subject to surveillance identical to that described in this report.

Only limited quantities of poultry products, mainly specialty items, are imported into the United States.

Inspection of Meat Products on Entry

A meat inspection certificate issued by the responsible official of the exporting country must accompany each shipment of meat offered for entry into the United States. The certificate identifies the product by origin, destination, shipping marks, and amounts. It certifies that the meat comes from animals that received veterinary ante-mortem and post-mortem inspection; that it is wholesome, not adulterated or misbranded; and that it is otherwise in compliance with U.S. requirements.

As a further check on the wholesomeness of the meat, U.S. inspectors at the port of entry inspect part of each shipment. To assure that a representative sample is selected, statistical sampling plans are applied to each lot of product to be inspected. The sampling plans and criteria for acceptance or rejection of imports are the same as those used for U.S. federally inspected meat. Samples of frozen products are defrosted prior to inspection. Import inspectors check the condition of canned meat containers and open sample cans for inspection of contents. Labels are verified for prior U.S. approval and the accuracy of stated net weights is checked. Specimens are routinely submitted to meat inspection laboratories to check compliance with compositional standards. Sample cans are also subjected to periods of incubation for signs of spoilage.

Meat imports are monitored for residues, such as pesticides, hormones, heavy metals, and antibiotics, by selection of representative samples for analysis by U.S. laboratories. Special control measures are in effect for handling of meat from countries when excessive amounts of residues are detected. The procedures consist of refusing or withholding entry to product until results of laboratory analyses are received.

The reconditioning or reworking of unsatisfactory products or defective lots is not generally permitted in the United States. Exceptions are made for damaged or dented canned products which may be sorted and reoffered for entry, and for correction of slight irregularities in labeling. Not until all examinations and tests show full conformity with U.S. standards are products allowed to enter U.S. commerce. Products that fail to qualify are held under U.S. Customs bond until they are reexported, or destroyed for human food purposes. Under strict controls, some refused products may be permitted entry solely for use in pet food.

Inspectors assigned to import inspection have wide experience in the domestic program. Special schools are provided for additional training in this phase of inspection. The entire thrust of the program is for uniformity of import inspection and proper application of requirements to assure consumers that imported meats are as wholesome as domestic products.

During calendar year 1976, 12,901,929 pounds of meat were refused entry. Totals are shown in Part IV, Table 2.

PART II.—Certification of Foreign Plants

Report of the Secretary of Agriculture on Administration of Section 20 of the Federal Meat Inspection Act for 1976 Calendar Year

Pursuant to Subsection 20(e)(1) of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 620(e)(1)), I hereby certify that the foreign plants listed in Subpart B of Part III of this report have complied with requirements at least equal to all inspection, building construction standards, and all other provisions of the Federal Meat Inspection Act and regulations issued thereunder, and currently are approved to have their products imported into the United States (subject to comments in said listing).

Done at Washington, D.C., this 3rd day of February, 1977.

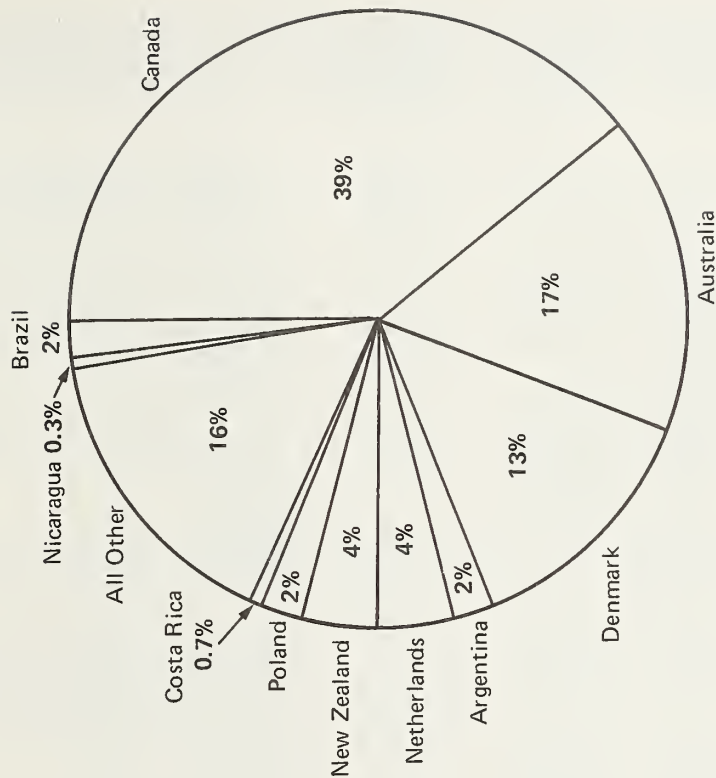

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "J. M. Mulhern". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first letters of the first and last names being capitalized and prominent.

* Total Full-Time Inspectors	20	19	18	15	17	16	15	15

* Does not include Foreign Programs' Director or Assistant Director, who spent 14 weeks in supervisory visits to foreign plants.

Department inspectors made 2,840 inspections of authorized plants in 1976 calendar year. The date of each inspection is reported with the listing in Subpart B for the respective plant. Besides visits to authorized plants, inspectors made 97 inspections of plants not authorized to import products into the United States during 1976 calendar year. Teams inspected 44 plants. Those were recorded as a single inspection.

D.—Number of inspectors licensed by foreign countries to inspect imports subject to the Act and facilities in which such imports were handled: 8338

Frequency of such inspection: Continuous when U.S. imports prepared, except small volume (non-slaughtering) processing operations controlled by patrol visits. The same procedures are used in the United States. Processing plants receiving patrol inspections use only products of animals slaughtered under continuous inspection.

Effectiveness of such inspection: See Subpart B of this Part III and narrative in Part I of this report.

PART IV.—Detailed report showing the total volume of products imported into the United States from each foreign country, with itemization showing the volume of each major category of products imported from each country, and a report of rejections of foreign products for failure to meet standards prescribed by the Act—Continued

Product rejections – breakdown by reason for rejection

The defects contributing to the rejections of each type of product are listed in their order of frequency as recorded during inspections. Many times individual rejections are the results of a combination of these listed defects.

Fresh Beef and Veal

1. Adulteration with hair, bone and extraneous material
2. Bruises and blood clots
3. Ingesta
4. Pathological lesions
5. Decomposition

Fresh Mutton and Lamb

1. Adulteration with wool, bone and extraneous material
2. Pathological lesions
3. Ingesta
4. Bruises

Fresh Pork

1. Adulteration with hair, bone and extraneous material
2. Labeling and marking
3. Decomposition
4. Short weight

Canned Beef

1. Unsound cans (flippers, springers, swellers, damaged seams)
2. Short weight
3. Adulteration with extraneous material
4. Excessive pesticide residues
5. Noncompliance with standards of composition

Canned Pork and Canned Other

1. Excessive pesticide residues
2. Unsound cans
3. Adulteration with extraneous material
4. Short weight
5. Failure to meet compositional standards
6. Undercooked

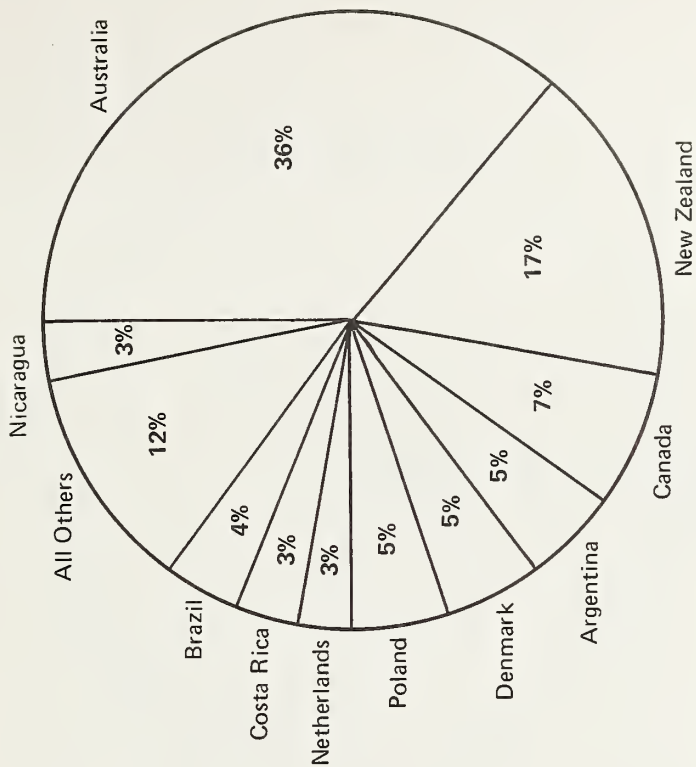

Cooked Beef

1. Insufficiently cooked (Quarantine violation from foot-and-mouth infected countries)
2. Adulteration with extraneous material
3. Decomposition

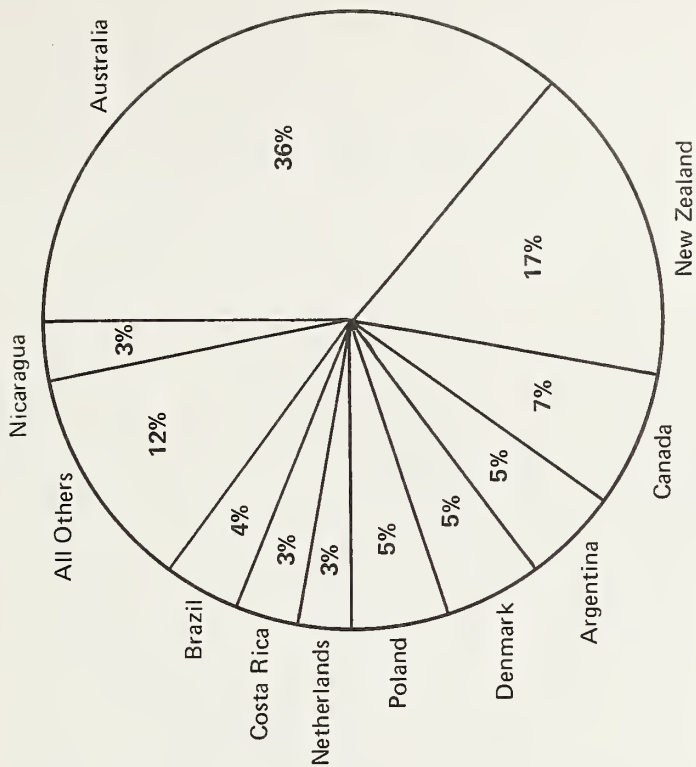

Horsemeat (Fresh and Canned)

1. Adulteration with extraneous material
2. Noncompliance with standards
3. Container defects
4. Pathological lesions
5. Decomposition
6. Labeling and marking
